These goal statements reflected the faculty's commitment to Michigan's Entry Level Standards for Beginning Teachers (1993), and the Interstate New Teacher Assessment and Support Council (INTASC, 1992) standards. In 1997, additional work by faculty expanded the theoretical component of the Conceptual Framework. Faculty continue to assess this framework and adapt programs as state standards evolve to guide teaching so all learn.

The original document was composed by individuals from many different ethnic groups, age groups, and geographic locations, and thus reflected the heterogeneity of the metropolitan Detroit area. As they conceptualized the document, it was to be a product of a diverse group that spoke equally to the common ground shared by members of the University community and to the uniqueness and individuality of each community member. The Conceptual Framework continues to reflect such diversity.

Each teacher certification program requires the completion of coursework in these three areas:

University core curriculum

Professional education, including clinical experience

90% completed coursework in major and a teaching minor in approved academic subject areas

All programs may be completed on a full-time or part-time basis. The clinical experience requirement, however, requires one semester of a 15-week placement of full-day attendance during the regular school day. Students should begin to prepare early for this experience that is the capstone of all teacher education programs. Preparation includes maintaining frequent communication with assigned education advisor, academic advisor, and, if applicable, the financial aid advisor. Lesson plans created during courses should be retained for reference during clinical experience. In addition, each student must become

Commitment to Professionalism

Every faculty member in the Education Department is committed to making the highest standards of professionalism a significant component of the process of preparing educators and future educators for successful professional experience. Learning to be a professional is far more complex than completing a sequence of courses.

Education emphasizes a high level of responsibility, honesty, commitment, integrity, work habits, interpersonal skills, enthusiasm, creativity, sense of humor, leadership, judgment, potential for growth, and other qualities and characteristics valued by the profession.

Educators are in a position to become the most influential adults in the lives of many students. Individuals who wish to become educators must be aware that evidence of professionalism does not begin the day student graduates or is awarded a teaching certificate. Indicators of professionalism must be readily evident during the time an individual is preparing to enter as well as advance in the education profession.

Some behaviors indicating the likelihood that an individual will perform as a professional include:

1. Regular and punctual class attendance with substantive participation
2. Promptness in completion of clinical work requirements
3. Engagement in a variety of clinical placement opportunities with children and youth
4. Involvement in professional groups or activities
5. Substantiated understanding of education-related issues
6. Verified comprehension of professional literature
7. Communicated awareness of community, state, national, and world events which impact the teaching profession
8. Contributing to the profession, including educational research and writing
9. Building collegiality by working with peers in collaborative, reflective and problem-solving settings
10. Demonstrated appropriate interpersonal skills

The faculty will take the accumulated information into consideration when making formal decisions regarding admission to the Teacher Education Program, permission to student teach and/or departmental awards. When concerns accumulate over time and/or are observed by several members of the faculty, students may be requested to meet with their advisors, the Department Chair, or a committee of the faculty to:

1. Explore the nature of the concern(s);
2. Hear the student's perception of the reason for the concern(s); and/or
3. Discuss any corrective or remedial actions which may be appropriate and/or the feasibility of continuing in the professional education sequence.

Duration of the Student Teaching Contact

The Clinical Experience contact for students seeking elementary or secondary level certification will consist of a full-day, 15-

Disability Support Services

The mission of Disability Support Services, in keeping with the University's mission to provide excellent student-centered undergraduate and graduate education, is to create an accessible community where students with disabilities have an equal opportunity to fully participate in all aspects of the educational environment.
